NEUROSCIENCE

Welcome!

Neuroscience is the study of the structure and function of neurons and how they are assembled to produce behaviors. Neuroscience was implemented as a new interdisciplinary major in 1999, replacing the Psychobiology Program and providing a strong foundation in neuroscience and related courses. Our students benefit from small classes and investigative labs in their introductory and advanced courses. Our majors graduate with a liberal arts background and a strong foundation in neuroscience which allows them to proceed to medical school or attend top-ranked graduate neuroscience, cognitive science, and psychology Ph.D. programs, including UC Berkeley, UC San Diego, Duke and Northwestern.
